

Christine Duffy

President, Carnival Cruise Line

Christine is President of Carnival Cruise Line, the flagship brand of the world's largest cruise company, Carnival Corporation & plc. As President, she leads Carnival Cruise Line's fleet of 29 ships that homeport in North America, Europe and Australia, sailing nearly six million guests annually and employing more than 52,000 people who hail from 120 nations around the globe. She reports to Josh Weinstein, Chief Executive Officer of Carnival Corporation & plc.

Christine's "people first" business philosophy and wealth of experience in the travel industry makes her an accessible and relatable leader as Carnival Cruise Line leverages its commitment to delivering safe, fun and memorable vacations to its millions of guests and growing customer base. Since joining Carnival Cruise Line as its first female President, Christine has overseen the introduction of new ships and capacity expansion, including the introduction of the first liquefied natural gas (LNG) cruise vessels in North America, as well as ships with the first roller coasters at sea. Under her leadership, Carnival Cruise Line was the first major U.S. brand to return its entire fleet to guest operations after the industry-wide pause related to the COVID-19 pandemic. She also oversaw the establishment of a state-of-the-art Fleet Operations Center at the company's Miami headquarters, which incorporates technology utilized by NASA and the U.S. Navy for real-time fleet monitoring and enhanced decision-making.

Christine joined the cruise industry in 2011 when she was named President and Chief Executive Officer of the Cruise Lines International Association (CLIA). While at CLIA, she elevated the industry's profile before consumers, regulators, industry stakeholders and the media; led the adoption of the Cruise Passenger Bill of Rights to enhance the industry's commitment to passenger safety, comfort and care; managed the industry response to several high-profile crises; and consolidated a network of 15 cruise industry organizations into one global association.

Prior to CLIA, Christine spent 10 years at Maritz Travel Company, the world's largest corporate meeting, events and incentive travel company where she served six years as President and Chief Executive Officer. In this capacity, she worked directly with a variety of Fortune 500 corporations in the automotive, pharmaceutical, financial services and technology sectors.
